Correspondence respecting Consul Burton's Proceedings at Damascus.

No. 1.

Lord Stenley to Consul Burton.

(No. 1.)
Sir. Foreign Office, December 3, 1869.

I HAVE to state to you that the Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint you to be Her Majesty's Consul at Damascas in the place of Mr. Rogers, who has been appointed Her Majesty's Consul at Cairo, and I herewith inclose a certified copy of Her Majesty's Commission to that effect.

Your experience of the details of the Consular service renders it nanccessary for me to furnish you with instructions with regard to your duties at your new post. I need only remind you that Her Majesty's Government attach great importance to the puntcual transmission to this office of the various returns required by the General Consular Instructions, and of any further information which you may be able to obtain relating to commerce and unvigation, or any other branch of statistics.

The salary attached to this appointment is at the rate of 700% a year, and an allowance of 3001 a year will be made to you for office expenses.

You are restricted from cogniging in commercial pursuits, and all fees by law leviable by Her Majesty's Consuls are to be collected on account of Her Majesty's Government in conformity with the directions given in Paragraph 9 of the General Instructions.

Your salary and allowance will be issued to your assigns at the office of Her Majeaty's Paymester-General in London, in equal quarterly payments, and they are to cover, so far as this office is concerned, not only the expenses of your maintenance, but also the ordinary expenses of your Consulate.

Such of the fees as are collected under the Orders in Council relative to Consular Jurisdiction in the Levant (Judicial Fees) must be dealt with in accomiance with the orders which you will find in the Consulate.

A sum of 160%, is assigned to you for outfit.

I am, &c. (Signed) STANLEY.

No. 2.

Consul Burton to Mr. Hammond .- (Received May 12.)

(Separate.)
Sir. Buenos Agres, March 30, 1869.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Lord Stanley's despatches of December 3 and 7, 1868, and to request that you will be good enough to convey to Lord Stanley the expression of my best thanks for the honour which Her Gracious Majesty has done me, in appointing me through him Her Majesty's Consul at Damaseus.

I have the honour to add that I have only this day, on my return from a tour over the Andes, received my appointment and commission as Her Majesty's Consul at Damaseus, and consequently that I return to England on my way to my post by the next Royal Mail steam-packet leaving on April 26. In the meantime I intend to utilize the delay by proceeding to Paraguay in order to finish a Report upon the present exceptional and sunguinary was, which I had already commenced in a former journey.

I have, &c. (Signed) RICHARD F. BURTON

My Lord,

One to inform your Level-slip that the prospect of the arrival of Captain Burton, as Her Majerty's Canada at Danescone is viewed with approbasion by many persons connected with that place.

Demoscus is probably the most function from in the Empire, and the presence there, in the character of British Consul, of a person who had penetrated to the Prophet's shrine, is regarded as exercise to cause exhibitions against him that may be productive of very undesirable consequences.

By the Museulman population Captain Burton is regarded either as latting insulted their religion by taking part as an unbeliever in their most accord rites, or else as having, at that time, issue a Mahounedan and lawing become a renegade.

Under either supposition he would be regarded with aversion by most, and with latrest by very many of the population, and it is my duty to draw your Loudship's attention to a consideration which was probably lost eight of when Captain Borton was selected for the post.

Count Burton to Mr. Morrey .- (Received June 30.)

(Separate.) Howlett's Hotel, Munchester Street, Manchester Square, Sir, London, June 21, 1862.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Separate despatch of the 19th instant, and to express my gratitude for the marrian with which his Lordship has favoured me.

I now renew in writing the verbal statement in which I assured his Lordship that neither the authorities not the people of Damascus will show for me any but the most friendly feeling; that they will, in fact, receive me as did the Egyptians and the people of Zamilbur for years after my journey to Mecca. But, as designing persons may have attempted to complicate the aftention, I once more undertake to act with unusual presence, and, under all circumstances, to hold myself only answemble for all the consequences.

Mr. Elliot to the Karl of Clarendon .- (Received July 18.)

(No. 290.) Constantinople, July 5, 1869. My Lord. BASHID PASHA, the Governor-General of Syria, in the course of his visit to me this morning, asked, with some anxiety, whether Captain Burton was expected to proceed to the Consulate of Damiscos.

I said that I believed be might shortly be expected there, but that he had been warned by your Lordship to be extremely careful to avoid doing anything calculated to give offence, or to create susceptibility on the part of the people of Damascus.

Your Lordship, I observed, could not properly cancel an appointment made by your predecessor, but had laid strict injunctions upon Captain Burton, which he would not be likely to neglect; and in return for these I trusted that the authorities would exert themselves to prevent his being subjected to any annoyance.

His Excellency answered that a British Consul who would be regarded as a renegade Musculman must necessarily find himself in a very difficult position.

Inclosure in No. 16.

Consul Burton to Sir H. Elliot.

Damaseus, August 28, 1870. I HAVE the honour to report to your Excellency that troubles were expected in Demancus yesterday (Saturday, August 27) when the Redif was being mustered. Crosses had been drawn on the ground and in the water-closets of the mesques, as happened in 1860. Christians had been threatened in the streets and bastars, many families left the city, and in some instances the newly-arrived troops showed a lesstile animus. The Ottoman authorities, however, have been alive to a sense of their danger, and as long so they do their duty there will never be a massacre at Damascus. The Redif, including those from Aleppo and ebowhere, and now numbering 1,600 men, was sent out of the city, not through the Christian quarter, where these would have been a disturbance, but end the Dandah and the Zaynabych to the villages of Kwayr, Sawman, and Kabun, distant about one hour's ride. Here a camp has been pitched for them. and they will be drilled for a month.

The Moslem population has been excited against the Christians, unjustly attributing to the latter the mustering of the Redif, which has never yet been called out at Damascus. I have the honour to bring to your Excellency's notice the admirable conduct of his Excellency Holo Pasias, formerly acting Mutasarrif of this city, and now transferred to St. John d'Acre. He has patrolled the streets in person during every night, and has been ceaseless in his endeavours to arrest the evil intentioned. It is with regret that I see such a man transferred to Acre, instead of being placed at some important post at Hamah, Tripoli, or other disturbed district, where his presence would be a benefit to Syria. His views have been thwarted by Said Effendi Ustwdani, President of the Majiis Tamyiz el-Hukuk, a fanatical and bigeted man, who refuses to receive Christian testimony, and who, relying upon the interest of his Excellency Rushdi Pasha, gratifies his prejudice against aliens to his faith by stirring up the had feelings of the Moslems.

Amongst the minor officials I would bring to your Excellency's notice the names of Issuall Agha and Serur Agha. The former is Acting Commandant of Police at Damescus during the absence at Jerusalem of his Chief, Mustafa Bey. Had the latter heen in this city, my belief is that the lives of the Christian population would have been in immainent danger. The second bus lately been made Yuchushi of Police, and is well known in the dangerous and excitable Maydan quarter; he has set an excellent example, and deserves reward. He will receive none if Mustain Bey return.

His Excellency the Wali Rashid Pasha is still at Jerusalem. His Excellency the Membie Mohammed Rifet Pasha left Damaseus at a day's notice on Thursday, the 25th instant. We regret the departure of this officer, whose courtesy and restiness to oblige were exceptional at Dannacus. Until yesterday, when his Excellency Ibrahim Pasha received his orders to take charge, there was no Mutasarrif, or Governor of the city. We have, therefore, been living almost without authority, and the Christians mainly owe their safety to the excellent conduct of the three officers above mentioned

Since my letter of the 11th of July, 1870, one Protestant school has been closed, and three others were threatened with closing by the local Mudirs, who acted, they said, under orders from Damascus. I at once procured a counter-order from his Excellency Holo Pushn, then acting Governor of the city, and no complaints upon the subject have since reached ma. The closing of the schools is generally attributed to the animus excited by the ill-judged proceedings of Mr. Mentor Mott.

I have, &c.

No. 18.

Sir H. Rilint to Earl Granville - (Retrieved January 31.)

(No. 25. Confidential.)

Constantinople, January 15, 1871. My Loni, THE Confidential Memorandum of which I have the honour herewith to inclose u copy, is the extract of a letter from the Governor-General of Syria to Aali Pasha, complaining of Captain Burton, Her Majesty's Consul at Damascus.

What is stated of the good reception given to Captain Burton by the authorities on his arrival at Damascus, notwithstanding the repuguance with which they riewed his appointment, is perfectly correct; but, although it was boasted of by him at the time, it was entirely owing to my having told the Governor-General, who feared some exhibition of fanaticism, that I held him responsible for Captain Burton being received with all the respect due to a British Consul.

* Incomer in No. 18.

I must do his Excellency the justice to say, that he faithfully kept the promise which be then made me-

It is difficult to be accurately informed as to what is doing by our own Agents at such a distant place as Damascus, and I am slow to accept the criticism passed by hostile, and perhaps interested, parties, or by Turkish officials, who may have had differences with them; but your Lordship is aware that I have for some time back been apprehensive that Captain Burton's proceedings were of a nature to give ground for anxiety. although it would have been impossible for me to bring forward any one act sufficient to justify a recommendation of his removal from his Consulate.

The complaint of the Governor-General, embodied in the Memorandism now inclosed, is likewise founded upon Captain Burton's character and general proceedings.

I had heard vaguely and unofficially of the occurrence mentioned in the Memoranslum, when Mrs. Burton was said, with her own hand, to have horse-whipped a person whom she considered as having failed in showing the respect she thought due to her, and when a shot was fired by one of her attendants; but an unwillingness to have the name of a lady brought forward in such an affair had prevented me from inquiring

Although the emoluments of the Consulate at Damaseus were raised upon the appointment of Captain Burton, I have always questioned the necessity of keeping it up upon the present scale; and I am only waiting for the report of Mr. Kennedy before submitting the question of its reduction to your Lordship.

Imve, &c. HENRY ELLIOT. (Signod)

Inclosure in No. 18.

Note-Verbale.

Le 11 Janvier, 1871.

(Confidenticile.) LORSQUE M. Rogers, ex-Consul d'Angleterre à Dames, fut désigné pour le poste du Cairo, la nomination de son successeur M. Burton produisit une facheuse impression sur les lieux. Le séjour de M. Burton dans le Rédjuz, où il avait embrassé l'Islamisme, faisait craindre que la population de Damas ne vit pas avec plaisis l'arrivée du nouveau Consul. Il n'en fut rien pourtant.

La consideration dont jouit en Turquie un Consul d'Angleterre est telle que le passé de M. Burton ne fat pos remné, et que le Consul rencontra partout un accueil favorable, notamment auprès des autorités locales. En effet, celles-el firent tout ce qui dépendait d'elles pour entretenir des rapports amicaux avec lui et le truitèrent sur le ateme pied que ses collégues, queiqu'à proprement parier M. Burton ne soit pas on Consul commes les autres. La Sublime Porte ne veut pas s'étendre içi sur la conduite personnelle de cet agent, sur ses longues et fréquentes absences, su point que les relations des autorités Impériales avec lui et ses propres affaires en souffrent. Elle ne reut pas non plus s'occuper des excursions qu'il fait de tous cités, accompagné de sa danc, exposés tous les deux à toute espèce de périls, ni des classes aux bétes féroces auxquelles ils se livrent dans les defilés les plus suspects, et où les accidents de tout genre sont probables.

M. Burton va dresser en tente aux confins du désert, la promène dans les villages les plus éloignés, campe pour plusieurs jours dans les cités les plus sauvages. Comme homme M. Burton n'intéresse personne; c'est comme Consul d'Angleterre que su prisonce devient inquietante à Danus, et c'est ce que la Sublime Porte crait devoir faire connaître confidentiellement à Sa Majesté Britannique.

Malheuremement, M. Burton a on no sait pour quel motif, une aversion toute spéciale pour la nation Musulmane, et ce qui rend suriout son attitude hostile le plus étrange c'est qu'elle est desmétralement opposée à la politique de son Couvernement via-à-via de la Turquie et à la conduite de ces prédecemeurs. Dans ses conversations avec tout le monde, et jusque dans celles qu'il a avec le Gouverneur-Général de Syrie, il ne cesse de représenten les Musulmans toujours surexeités, les Chrétiens épouvantés, d'où il ne tarde point à faire naître des massacres, et toutes ces idées alserades, tous les pronostics funcstes qu'il puise dans son imagination, il les soutient et les propage dans un moment où la Syrie n'a jamais joui d'une tranquillité et d'une sécurité aussi parfaite dans un motoent où les relations entre Chrétiens et Musulmans non seulement sont très bonnes, mais tendent encore à devenir meilleurs, grâce à l'exemple donné par les autorités. M. Burton n'hisite pas à avancer ces mêmes idées dans les lettres qu'il écrit au Genverneur-Oénémi. Ses sentiments et ses dispositions se sont fait jour d'une manière plus éclatante encure dans un incident qui eut lieu récemment.

Le Consul d'Angleterre habitait dernièrement avec sa femme dans un village cloigné de quelques heures de Damas. Madame Burton allait un jour à l'église, lorsqu'elle fonctta de sa propre main un jeune Musulman qui ne s'était pas levé sur son passage; ensuite un de ses domestiques fit fen sur ce même jeune homme sous protexte qu'il surait été insolent pendant qu'on le fonettait. Quoiqu'une enquête soit ouverte on ce moment. M. Burton no veut pas poursuivre l'affaire régulièrement et legalement; mais travestissant le fait, il finit pas revenir sur son thème favori et dire que les Chrétiens sont menacés, que la sécurité dans les envicons n'existe plus, qu'on ast à la verifie des événements de 1860. Cette idée a tellement pénétré dans l'esprit de M. Burton qu'à l'occasion de la dernière note Russe, il ne douts plus d'une guerre. De là à un soulèvement en Syrie il n'y a qu'un pas pour lui, et il a répété partout qu'il réanimit les 4,000 ou 5,000 Algériens qui se trouvent en Syrie pour se mettre à leur tête et protéger les Chrétiens. M. Burton est allé jusqu'à dire qu'il avait demandé à son Courressent l'autorisation d'en agir ainsi. D'où il faut conclure que cet Agent désire réellement et à tout prix que des désordres se produisent pour qu'il puisse jouer probablement un rôle et se faire remacquez.

Tel est ce Consul, chassant les ours, déscriant en chancellerie, négligeant ses affaires et celles des autorités locales, médisant de la population Musulmane, qu'il represente sous les confeurs les plus fansses, ayant les relations les plus intimes avec les gens les plus malfamés dans les pays et les plus compromis dans les évenements passes ; permet iant à sa femme de se promener en ville portant sur elle des armes à feu, afin d'indisposer les Musulmans et de donner à entendre aux Chrétiens que la sécurité est compromiso; rempli de maiveillance marquée envere les autorités, qu'il bafone dans ses conversations lei et dans les correspondances qu'il public dans le "Levant Herald," Musulman naguère lui-même, il a en horseur nujourd'hui les Musulmans; tel est le Consul que le Gouvernement de la Majesté Britannique a envoyé à Damas, et avec lequel les autorités Impériales ont fait jusqu'à ce jour et continuent à faire des efforts infruetueux pour entrotenir des relations cordinles. La présence de M. Burton à Damas est d'autant plus péallele que la population a toujours considéré le Gouverne-ment de Sa Majesté Britannique comme l'allié le plus sincère de la Turquie et le plus sympathique aux Musulmana, tandis qu'anjourd'hui cette même population, en face des faits et gestes du nouveau Consul, out à se domander ai les dispositions de l'Angleterre ne sont plus les mémes.

No. 20.

Mr. Kennedy to Earl Granville, - (Received March 6.)

(No. 8.) My Lord.

Caire, January 30, 1871. I HAVE the honour to submit to your Lordship the following observations respecting Consular arrangements in Syria, which admit of being considered indopendent of the general questions of British Consular arrangements in the Ottoman

Her Majesty's Consul-General for that Province is vested with Jurisdiction over the Consulates of Alleppe, Damaseus, and Jerusalem, and various Vice-Consulates.

Syria is inhabited by people of various and opposite character, differing in mee and religion, divided into several distinct communities, of which none predominates over the others, and yet having interests so intermingled that mere local questions excite general concern; and thus a movement, which in its communecement is a purely local affair, may at any moment spread over the whole country. In no part of Turkey is such care required to prevent actual causes of discontent, personal ambition, or sectarian rivalries from leading to an outbreak. It is, therefore, more necessary in Syria than in other countries that Consular action should be uniform.

I would not recommend that any attention should be made with respect to the footing of the Aleppo Consulate; but it is advisable that the Comul at Aleppo should furnish the Consul-General, more regularly than now appears to be the case, with opies of all his political despatches, especially of these relating to Arab affairs. Beyrout and Damaseus are so gear, and communication between the two places by means of a good carriago road on which a daily coach runs, as well as by telegraph, is so easy, that in the abstract it would seem better to station resident Vice-Consuls at those places, both to be under the direct superintendence of the Consul-General, who should reside at, or visit each place, according to the requirements of the public service. The Governor-General of Sycia, to whom he is accredited, resides elicity at Damascus. Even should it be expedient to maintain a full Consulate at Damascus, either to preserve equality with the Agente of other powers, or far general political considerations relative to the importance of the place, it would be for the advantage of the public service to place the post immediately under the Convol-

The present emolaricuts of the Consulate at Damescus are 700t a year salary, and 300f. office allowance: if placed on the revised footing 500f. and 200f. a year, respectively would be sufficient. * The salary assigned to the Consul-General, 1,000t. a year, in sufficient; but his office allowance, 250th a year, does not defray netnal office expenses. I would submit that it should at once be mixed to 300% with 100% exten as a salary for the first Dragottan. But if the Consul-General should be directed to visit Dannacus as well as reside at Beyrout, which, inasmuch as during the summer he is compelled, on necount of the climate, to take a house in the Lebanon, and is thus between the two piaces, could easily be done,—the office allowance must be further raised, and its amount must be again increased if an arrangement which I venture to think would be very beneficial, should be adopted, namely, that he should be instructed to visit annually different parts of his large Consular District, so as to become thoroughly cognizant with current local events.

* Instructions to this office have been given.
† The Consulate at Dissussem has been reduced to a Vice-Consulate on this facilities.

I do not recommend any alteration in regard to the Consulate at Jerusalem; except that, if the Porte continues to object to Mr. Kayat's appointment as Vice-Consulat Jaffa, the duties of the post should be intrusted to the Consulat Jerusalem.

The post is necessary, and so long as there is no qualified resident to hold it, the arrangement I suggest seems to be the only practicable course to pursue. The Commit at Jerusalem should maintain an office, with a clerk or a Dragoman, at Jaffa, and the salary, 1904 a year, might be given as a personal allowance to mark clearly the precise induce of the arrangement.

Statements made to me respecting British trade in Northern Syrin induce me to think that a Vice-Consulate, to be held as a salaried post by a British subject, is much wanted at Alexandretta. It is now an unpaid Vice-Consulate, and is vacant owing to the difficulty of finding a untable person to take it.

British commercial interests have already increased in that part of the country both as regards traces and cultivation for exportation; and on that account, as well as to provide for the great changes unfor animal works will being about, and to give that security which the presence of an intelligent English agent confers. I beg to recommend the establishment of this post. The empluments should not be less than 2501 salary and 1001 office allowance a-year; the climate, too, is now so unhealthy that the post could not be held long. I would therefore acid, that it would be an advantage to the public service, and also to the officer himself, if it should be understood to be a junior post, as a rule not to be held for more than four years.

The salary of the Vice-Consulate at Beyrout, 350%, a-year, is quite adequate, if it is regarded as a junior post.

In cegard to the Cyprus Consulate, which, as being also apart from other Consular atmagements in Turkey, may likewise be dealt with in this Report, I would submit that the post which is now varont should be given to Mr. Lang, the present Acting-Consul; or, if he is not disposed to accept it, to Mr. Riddell. Both these gentleman are British. subjects, and merchants of the highest respectability. There are no great British intorests at Cyprus, but the island lies away from other Consulates; British trade is increasing; protection is wanted for British subjects there; and for these reasons, as well as to provide for contingent ovents, the amintenance of a Consular establishment. there is necessary. The present salary of the post is 250% and 50% office allowance. I am of opinion that an office allowance of 150% or 100% a-year, without salary, would be remoneration for the post, adequate alike for public requirements and the services meeted of a Consul engaged in commerce; and I would further observe, in passing, with reference to my future Report, that there are other places were similar arrangethouts might advantageously be made; often British interests require the presence of a Count or Vice-Consul, though the requirements are not such as to justify a salary on the scale which is necessary when such salary forms the whole source of the Consular Officer's income. 2

The arrangements I have now suggested will, I feel sure, prove nor intercous to public interests, and they can, moreover, be carried out without entailing eventually, my additional charge to the Exchequer. There would be a saving of 300% a year at Damaces, and 1806 or 200% at Cypras; the latter, which can be effected at once, will provide for the proposed increase at Beyrout, and the former for the Vice Consulate at Alexandretta.

There is another matter which, although it adverts to Turkey generally. I will here advert to so far as it relates to Consular arrangements in Syria, namely, the position of Consular Dragomans. There cannot be a doubt that it would be a vast benefit to the public service generally, and to individual British interests, if British subjects were trained for these appointments. Some additional expense would be incurred, but I feel bound to say that the result would be worth its cost, and I think a scheme would be devised, without difficulty, for encying out such a system. Moreover, it seems that dragomans, natives of the country, only temporarily employed, who are engaged in political duties, or in pressing the settlement of claims, are necessarily placed in positions of great difficulty. They cannot avoid giving offence to persons of influence. Besides, they are always underpaid and often unpaid. It is said that it is a general custom of all such dragomans to undertake the settlement of claims other than those which they officially support, on their own private account, receiving half or more of the amount recovered. In the existing state of judicial administration in many places this may well be so. Mr. Abcarius, the first dragonian of the Consulate-General, has poken very openly to me on these matters. On occasions when I have availed myself of his services he has shown great ability as an Interpreter; and Mr. Eldridge, Mr. Black, the principal British merchant at Beyrout, Mr. Lang, Acting Consul in Cyprus, and others, have spoken in very high terms of him.

I would recommend that, at all events, the first Dragonaus of these Consulties should be taken into direct Government employment and receive their mary from Government instead of from the Consul. With that view I have suggested that on the increase of the office allowance at Beyrout, 100f., a-year should be assigned to the First Dragonau, and deductions equivalent to the salaries which might be assigned to these officers could be made from the present officers' allowances at Damascus and Jerusalem. I am uncertain which of the dragonaus at Damascus Captain Burton would recommend for the post, but at Jerusalem Mr. Salams, an efficient public servant is well deserving of the appointment.

As a condition attached to such appointments these diagonans would require permanent protection. When their active services censed they would be entitled to pensions, and would require protection to be extended to them, as it is now granted to two old, though unpaid, public servants in Syria, Dr. Medaka at Damaseus, and Mr. Tabbett at Beyrout.

No. 21.

Sir H. Elliot to Barl Granville .- Received March 6.)

(No. 11. Commercial.)

My Lord, Constantinuple, February 14, 1871.

I HAVE the honour to forward to your Lordship Mr. Kennedy's Report upon the Consular establishment in Syria, and, in accordance with your Lordship's instructions, I will accompany it with such remarks as his recommendations seem to call for.

The first of them has reference to the Consular establishment of Damascus, which he proposes to reduce to a lower scale than that upon which it is at present.

I am not aware of any reason which makes it necessary to keep up a first-class Consulate within such a short distance of the Consulate-General, and it may be open to question whether the positical reasons adverted to by Mr. Kennedy are sufficiently strong to prevent the reduction being carried even further than he suggests.

I do not as a rule think it necessary that the rank to be given to our Consular Agents should depend upon that of the Agents of other countries; but, in the premiur position of Damascus, it would not be desirable that ours should hold a lower rank than those of France and Russia, and if those Powers were to maintain Vice-Consulates there, we might be justified to do the same.

I certainly concur in Mr. Kennedy's remarks upon the insufficiency of the office allowance for the Consulate-General of Beyrout, and hope the Increase which he proposes may meet the most favourable consideration of Her Majesty's Government.

The candisherent of a paid Vice-Consulate at Alexandretta is much called for in the interest of British trade, which will, moreover, greatly increase whenever the works of the Euphrates Valley or Tigris Valley Hailway may commence, and I believe we may confidently expect that this will take place at no very remote date.

The work for a British Consul at Cyprus is so small that it might probably be satisfactorily performed in the manner suggested by Mr. Kennedy at a saving of half its previous cost, although the principle of intensting the Consular duties to a merchant of the place is one of doubtful expediency.

With regard to Jaffa I would state that the Porte's refusal to consent to the nomination of Mr. Knyat may be looked upon as final, not on account of any feeling against that gentleman, but as a matter of principle, from which they are determined not to depart, and the alternative suggested by Mr. Kennedy appears the best arrangement that could be made.

⁺ The Board of Trade considered the selected post morecovery, and an appaid Vice-Consol has since been ⁷ Mr. Long has been appointed Count, with 100% a year office all-manes.

His suggestion that Her Majesty's Consulate at Aleppo should be directed to send to the Consul-General at Beyrout copies of all his political despatches, and especially these relating to Arab affairs, deserves, I think, to be acted upon, for it is certainly describle that the Consul-General in Syria should be kept fully informed upon everything of political interest that passes among the Arabs.

Mr. Kennedy has beought under your Lordship's consideration the position of the First Dragounn of the Consulate-General of Beyrout, and has recommended his receiving a direct appointment and salary out of the proposed increased office allowance, and an assurance that British protection should be continued to him after his retirement.

The first part of the proposal appears very proper, but I would submit that the promise of indefinite protection would be undescrible.

Independent of the objection to an extension of the victous system of protections, which I have been striving to keep within the narrowest bounds, it is to be remembered that Turkish subjects are recognised as designments to the Consulates on the distinct understanding that our protection of them ceases with their functions, and the Ottoman. authorities would have an undoubted right to refuse to necognize certificates of protection at variance with that arrangement.

The regulations of the Parte on this matter, which have long been acquiesced in by the foreign Representatives, had probably not been made known to Mr. Kennedy when he brought forward the suggestion.

Your Loriship is aware that for some time past I have not been satisfied with the manner in which fler Majesty's Consulate at Damaseus has been conducted, Captain Burton not having successfed in giving greater attalaction to the British subjectswhether Christian missionaries or protected Jews-than to the Ottoman authorities, and I cannot withhold the opinion that he is not well suited to the post which he

GCCUPION.

The complaint made by the Porte of his habit of spreading aurming news of impending massures agrees with information which resolved me through other ladependent channels, but neither that, nor the alleged frequency of his absence from his post, would of themselves suffice to warrant the recall of a British Count. I consider, however, that his presence tends to unsettle the public mind at Damaseus, and to keep alive a sentiment of insecurity, which may at any time become a source of danger, and that it would be very desirable that he abouild be removed whenever an opportunity for it might offer.

As your Lordship has already decided to reduce the scale of the Consulate at Damascus, it might for the present be sufficient, in reply to the representation of the Porte, to inform them that a change will shortly be made.

AALI PASHA desired me to transmit, for your Executency's information and consideration, the inclosed copy of a telegram he had just received from the Governor-General of Syris, giving a summary account of an occurrence which took place at Nazareth

Mr. Burton, says Raschid Pasha, according to his wandering habits, went to Nazareth and encounted near the Greek Church. On St. George's Day, the Greek boys having assembled in the front of the church, an affray ensued between them and some of Mr. Burton's servants, in which that gentleman took an active part, and begun to flow at those. On hearing the report of fire-arms, the crowd which was at church came out, and the scuille took rather serious proportions.

Some of the Consul's people have been slightly wounded, and Mr. Burton was struck in the arm by a stone. It is very lucky, observes the Pasha, that the Greeks abarained from using any arms, otherwise the matter would have been ageravated. Mr. Burton has ranged some of the Greeks mixed up in the quarred to be apprehended and tied up, for the purpose of sending them to Damasons. The occurrence, states the telegram, is mainly to be ascribed to the Consul, whose imprudence in firing on the people gave the disturbance a serious character. The Pasha concludes his telegram by saving that he had instituted an inquiry, and that he would not fail to acquaint the Porte with the result of the investigation.

MR. BURTON, the British Consul at Damascus, who is generally in the habit of wandering about the country, was lately at Nazareth living in his tent, which was pitched near the Greek Church. On St. George's Day a quarrel arose between his servants and a number of Greek lads who were standing near the church. Mr. Burton took an active part in the quarrel by firing on the Greeks, who had now come out of church, which made matters worse. Although several of the Consul's people received slight wounds he himself was merely struck by a stone in the arm.

The Greeks did not retaliate by using arms of any kind, and consequently the occurrence did not assume a more serious turn.

The Consul demands that a great number of the Greeks, whom he has taken up and bound with cords, should be sent up to Damascus. I HAVE the henour to submit to your Excellency the following circumstances:-On Thursday, the 6th of April, 1871, the Protestant Cemetery at Damascus was once more broken into and violated. Scarcely a year has passed without this outrage being renewed; and on the present occasion justice is completely withheld. The tomb of the Counters Harley Teleki was destroyed, and a number of grave-atones removed from the place. After some investigations on the part of this Consulate, thirteen of the stones were recovered. Three of them were deposited in a mosque by Talibel-Kayyal, a Moslem ruffing of the Shaghur. He was absolved by the Majlis Tamiyis of Suda, upon the plea that he found the stones being carried about by children. The latter denied the whole of the story. The other ten atones were found in the possession of dirges Hajjar, a Greek Catholic. He asserted that be had bought them at under price from a Moxiem.

Abd-cl-Razzak was tried in the presence of a Consular Dragoman, and was condemned to thirty days' imprisonment, in the absence of the Dragoman, but was presently released. In fact, it is hopeless to expect justice from a Tribunal constituted as it is at present, when a few Napoleons to the President, and to the Head Clerk, can proceedings of Captain Burton in his recent visit to the Hauma and Jobel Bruse.

As Radud Pashs expresses a hope that, like himself, I shall disapprove of this journey, I can only refer the matter to your Excellency, as, beyond a private letter, dated the 23rd ultimo (received by me on the 25th), in which Captain Burton annuances his intention of starting for the Jebel Druse on the following day, I had no knowledge of his intentions or the objects of the journey, which may, perhaps, have been undertaken in purposance of instructions.

Without entering into the arguments of Rashid Pasin, I cannot refron from expressing an opinion that it was injudicious on the part of Captain Burton to have gone to the Jobel Drage without having at least informed the local authorities of his intention; as a similar journey, undertaken, as it were, secretly, would bear the interpretation, in the eyes of the populations, that Her Majesty's Government had some line of policy is view that differed from that of the Government of His Majesty the Saitan

Declaration of Mr. Drake.

ON May 5, 1871, Captain Burton and I were encamped at Nazareth (which is within his jurisdiction), near the Greek Church of the Annunciation.

Early in the morning I happened to be at a short distance from the tents, and hearing an angry voice. I went to see whose it was. I found an Abyssmian bey using violent language to Habib, who was telling him to heave the neighbourhood of the tents.

The Abyssinum continuing his abusive language, and picking up a stone to throw at Habib Mohammed, the cavass went down and began to beat him.

Four or five Greek Christians now set upon Habib and Mohamed, and then the other two servants, Autum and Salm, ran down to help.

A molec ensued, which assumed no serious aspect till the Greek Christians can round to the south side of the church, where they were out of sight of the tents, and where they were reinforced by the congregation from the church.

The servants (four in number), and two makers, followed them, and very shortly Captain Burton and I heard such a none that we judged it advisable to go to see what was taking place, as from the tents nothing could be seen. We accordingly ran down with call of a will go to 100 Greek Christians, who were throwing stones with all their force at Consul's servants, and (numediately that Captain Burton and I appeared) at us

The first stone thrown at me was a very large one, from the bands of Simstan el Ashr, at a distance of only four or five metres, which narrowly missed my head. At this moment Habile fired a shot from a revolver into the air. This checked the ruffants for an instant, and we were able to retreat to the south-seat corner of the church. Here captain Burton took the revolver, and fired a shot, as before, into the air. This dainted the mob, and we were able to retire alowly to the tents, though followed by showers of stones. Then, as the mob seemed menacing, we prepared our arms, and requested some the result of the result.

That mob was by no means made up of only lade and young men, as some of the Greeks wished to make out, but many old men were there, and those the richest and most influential members of the Greek community; men whose duty should have been to contrain their juniors, and not, as they did, to excite them to acts of extreme there.

This, probably, gave rise to the ridiculous stories of our horing entered the church which we did not do—and of our haring done damage there. by his flock with orders to do his namost, but I hear from the priest Kyrillos (Deacon

The policy of the Governor-General of Syria, his Excellency Rashed Pasha, has always been to oppose European influence as much as possible; so much so that it is a common saying in Damaseus, "The Consuls used to unmake the Wali, new the Walt unmakes the Consult," and consequently he sides with the Greeks. A firm, andependent man, with a thorough knowledge of the country and ways of dealing, like Cuptain Buston, is of course peculiarly obnoxious to him, and I have no doubt he would be very well pleased to see him removed, in hopes of his successor heing easier to use as a tool. This policy of antagonism to European influence must prove very detranental to Syria, as the reaction which must necessarily onsite will naturally turn too much to the other side. Syria is now in a peculiarly feverish state, and section first over the strong, especially between the Greek and Letter churches, so the gain as much ground by the growing influence of Russia as the latter have lost by the defeat of France and the occupation of Rome. If this affair is allowed to pass unnetweel, the agregance of the Greeke will undoubtedly cause a quartel with the Letters at Ananceth, and should the fire once he lighted, it would, with the present state of feedoor spread a r the whole country At Nazareth, however, Caption Burton took all possible precautions, making Littins, Morlems, and Greeks, conjuntly sign a guarantee for the preserving of peace.

In the meantaine c n burn a despatch, of which a copy is also melased, in which Captain Burton, after alluding to the unsatisfactory state of parthern Syria, mentions having savited the Chiefs to meet him, and reports the salutary effects of his interview with them,

Your Lordstop's extention, already notified to the Porte, of finding an apportunity of transferring Captain Burton to another post, makes it unbecessary to cammae at any longth the particulars of the complaints which have been made to me against him; but their general tenor was his determination to meddle with the internal administration of the district, the Governor of which wrote to the Porte, that if Her Majesty's Consul were to assume the virtual position of Governor, it would be impossible for himself to continue to direct the Government of the province. A letter, of which I have a copy to your Lordship chewhere, touching the affair at Nazareth, will a irocating Captain Burton's proceedings, unconsciously but conclusively samplant of the Governor

After stating that the Vali listes the Commis of the Great Powers, the letter goes on to say, that his Excellency "still more lates Captain Burton, for he is virtually t. bere, and there is not much use for a Governor; and he dare not do anything wrong for fear of him, for he can neither bully nor bribe him."

If, as I can hardly doubt, the above gives a currect description of the position assumed by Captain Burton, it certainly seems to show him to have innumberstood the duties and line of conduct to be followed by Her Majesty's Consular Agents, who, by co-operation or by frondly remonstrances with the provinced authorities, as the case tribute powerfully to the wells up as rival or antagonistic pow-state of thengo which may lead to disastrous results.

That many abuses exist in the administration of the province may be fairly assumed ; but Captain Burton, in his desire to remedy them, has not, as it appears to been sufficiently exceful in avaiding just come for undrage on the part of those who are responsible for its transmitality.

In booking back for the last four years I cannot but recollect that, previous to his come the decemen of the Commute of Damaseus, neither the local authorities nor Her Mojesty's Consul-teeneral at Beyrout look felt the singhtest anxiety about the state of the district, but that there has been a gendually mercasing unensiness ever smer.

The knowledge that the British Consul is in direct opposition with the local sufficiency is liable to be taken by the restless populations of those countries as an encouragement to resist them -

I THINK it my duty to being to your Excellency's notice the state of affairs octually existing in Southern Syria.

 I have already reported (in my desputch of the 20th ultime) the administration of the police and the protection of the city and its environs are left wholly in the hands in Bey, a man of noted meapacity and unusual finations. His nand is one Abdullah Apha, a negro, who, under the decetion of his t is to Mahoundonson and the feelings of the the time to a at nonneed

The conduct of the Walt Governor-ti-nergy of Exectioney Rushul Pashu, who belongs to the family of Molargood Ale, has ed not a bittle to increase popular excitement. He has now held office for six years since 1800; during which time he has amassed an immense fortune, and has dowed his particious to fell in his example. But the latter contributes to make interests at Constantanople by means of many friends, notably of Said 1 ffends, whose son married his datapiter, and the result is that he retains his appointment.

To Europeans and European subjects has Excellency Rashid Pada has shown humself irreconcentably hostile. He declares openly that he haveremoved the Italian Count, M. Pdastri, the Prasoan Consul, M. I was detained at Nazareth between May 5 and May 10, in order to watch the proceedings of the local authorities. The Turkish post was certainly open to me, but my despatch would assuredly have been read, and most probably would never have tracked its destination. Even at Pomascus I am compelled to be most circumspact when addressing despatches to Constantinople or Beyrout. I addressed an official report to his Excellency the Governor-General, who undertook to forward it to his Government, together with the version of the affair supplied to him by the Reverend the Greek Orthodox Bishop of Nazareth. My report to your Excellency was again delayed by waiting for the evidence of the Rev. Mr. Taylor and of his three follow-travellers.

The delay has thus arisen from my wish to lay the case before your Excellency complete in all its details. I can, if desired, supply confirmatory evidence of all my and the first the details of the first transmission of Nasareth, the severe migries received by two of my attenuants.

Domuscus, July 1, 1861

I HAVE the honour to bring the following circumstances to your Excellent totion:-

About noon on Thursday, June 20, 1871, I received a letter from Miss James, Superintendent of the British Syran Schools at Damasous, and covering a note from Mrs. Menter Mott, of Beyrout. The object was to suggest netive measures in the case of a Moslem convert to Christiamty. Hadj Hassan of Arbagic, after having been waylaid and besten (according to Dr. John Wortsbet), had been ordered up from Regrout to Damescus, in the custody of a policeman, by his Excellency the Governor-

I at once wrote to his Excellency representing that such action was an infraction. of the Trenty of 1836, which accured life and liberty to the se-called "renegative." On the evening of the same day his Excellency replied to me, apparently ignoring the Tecaty, and denying my right to interfere in a matter concerning the subject of 11 a perusal a despatch which he had addressed to the Doyen of the Consular Corps. Beyrout, complicating of the conduct of Protestant missionsmes, in secret procelytic ag., though he admitted that the convert, Hassan, had openly attended a Christian close b for some time; and justifying the arrest of the convert upon the plea of his requiring to be " compethet "

Has Hassen arrived at Damascus on the evening of Thursday the 20th ultimo-On the morning of Friday, the 30th ultimo, I requested Mr. Selim Meshaka, Dragoman

Visited by the resident missionaries, Mesons, Wright and Crawford

The answer was a refusal. I was on the point of sending a telegram to your Excellency when it was announced to me that the prisoner had been set free. On the following morning I addressed a letter of thanks to Rashed Pacha, and laid the honourto assure him that such an act of justice and telemtion would win for him the extremand good-will of the Christian community in Syria.

Haj Hossan, after being placed in safety at Her Majesty's Consulate, will leave I museus this evening in charge of the Rev M Waldmeier, of the British Syrian Schools. It is reported that an association of young Modems, at Beyrotti, proposes to therefore they many at after his one to I be the Larchery lawer I while Minnestry), of that city, is strong enough to prevent such an outinge, and a telegram from Constantinople, to the effect that justice is expected from him, would doubtless determine the authorities energetically to protect the convert.

On the morning of Friday, the Soth ultimo, it was reported to me that a certain Arsf ibn Abd-el-Ghanisel-Asblusi (a well-known family at Nablus), who had sacrebecoming stolen fourteen lamps and a silver pudlock, had been found banging in the prison of the Great Annual Mosqua at Danasens. Knowing the locality well, I cannot understand how the man could have hanged hanself without attracting the attention of the numerous night guardians, not to speak of the Indian and Affghan folgrins who swarm in the claisters; nor do I see why an inquest was not held upon the body. It is certain that some yours ago the man in question became a Christian at Athens, and that a strong feeling against him existed at Damascus.

Danascus, July 3, 1871.

IN continuation of my despatch of the lat instant, I have the benear to supply your Excellency with the following details .-

Before leaving Dammens, the convert, Haj Hasan appeared at Her Majesty Consultate, and on Salurany, July 1, I made a process certal of his case since he left Beyrout. He had been placed under arrest in the house of a bigeted Modern Mustafa Boy, the Mir Ali of Ponce, who, after allowing him to be malterated, threatened him with strang . ig About midday on Francy, June 80, he was sent for by his Excellency the Governor-General who, after locking the door, began with zeking him if he did not Year death, and ended by offering 30,000 pastres as a donceur for apostacy. The conse refused, and was ordered, despete his protests, to leave Beyout with his family aft term of twenty days, under pain of being sent to Constantinople with hands

I vertice to hope that this step will not be permitted. It will deal a fatal blow in Syria to the great principle of religious telemition. It will yab a ness by suggesting that, although supported by a Tresty which liberty to all converts, we cannot defend a convert from by instruent. The Wall will, of course, plead that his action, which I cannot but describe as contrary to Treaty, to intended to preserve a life threatened by a baseted Modern party. But he knows as well me I do that he can, if he really desires, protect the convert from violence. It is, however, evidently his object to gain farour with the people, whom his want of fanationing opinion and Consular interference

I have deemed it my duty to address his Excellency with a request for information touching the death of Arif Lifendi the Abi el Cham el Nationi. The Governor-Octored, however, returned my letter, declaring that may reply to it would be a personal jour death a of his conduct, and, viewing the affair in this light, he declines to notice it I am therefore compelled to offer an unofficial version of the death which I have collected from many reliable sources.

It appears that the decreesed in hirard to the Libraria about three years ago, and represented lumself to be a Modern converted to Chromounts Greek Orthodoxy, that he was entered by promises into Datomeans, that a charge, true or false, of rolling mosque property was brought against him, and that he was agreeted and confined in the nasque. This was an errogular step, the man should have been placed in the 1 die prisen. On the morning of Saturday, July 1, Art Effends was found hanging The public voice naturally madired how a man impresented and carefully guarded could obtain a rope in order to commit smeade, and the pulsor conscience was appeared with the report that the doub had been inflicted by Sayyidna Yahya (St. John the Reptint). in properd persons. Finally, I am assured that the body was not submitted to a medical regreet, as is the contagn in order to ascertain if the mouth had been gagged, and if marks of violence appeared upon it. As, however, it is well known that this coresapendence will be reported, an official account of the death can be readily drawn up with ad the usual formalities.

enture to hope that your Excellency will cause this mysterious death, which is ying the Christians and rejoicing the Moslems of Damascus, to be made the subject of official matrix, and will oppose the allegal banishment of the convert Haj Hassan. Both cases evidence the state of affairs actually existing in Syria under the present

Hassan, when making his deposition at the Consulate, declared · squaretance of his named Hansmudch tha el Bekk, a ust ve of Latikm, and domicifed at Beyrout, had disappeared about twelve days before the date of the proces cerbal (duly 1). I will not vouch for the truth of this report.

The Trenty of February 12, 1856 (Hertslet, vol. v. p.), absolutely confirms life and liberty to all converts and so-called renegates. But that concession was made in direct opposition to the spirit of the Modern world, which denomores the spostate as being mirrorthy to live, and which holds his private measurat in lawful and right. As early as December 1857, one of my predecessors, Mr. Consul Brandt, C.B., was compelled to myske the aid of Her Mejesty's Ambassador, Constantin ple, in order to gunrantee the unmanuty of the Moslem convert Khalil, and the affair was not settled without a long and exciting correspondence.

Altreat as soon as I took charge of the Consulate October Paul), certain Moderns, belonging to the Shazdi order of Dervides, became Cathelies, and fell under the displeasure of the local Government. As they took refuge in the Spanish Com Smits, he questions were then chiefly in the hands of France, and as the converted out in strange stories about rosons and the supernatural follows off of their fetters, I d. ! not think it proper to move in the matter, 8 till, it attracted the attention of travellers, especially of Mr. George Lane Pox.

It appears, then, that the Moslem authorities in Syria do not consider themselves bound to frest the person of the convert as my Marie. In his letter of June 29, 1871, has Excellence the Governor-General augments that I should have pointed out the Article which forbade han to hang up the Haj Hassan under charge of a puberman to Damasons, and to place him in the house occupied by the chief of police.

In conclusion, without wishing in any way to imposh freedom of action in cases of conversion, I venture to suggest that mesonarios, especially Protestant massanaries in Syria, he invited carefully and conscientiously to consider whether they are partified th canoning a M slein convert to the immunent risk of loung his life, and by irritating a fanatical people to risk causing for themselves and their co-religiousts such authredes of fury as characterized the last decade at Alegeo, Jedeah, and Damaseus.

AT the eak of more running your Excellency I am compeled once more to represent the arrange done to British subjects and protegos resulting in this vilayet, and to forward a list of their comus, some of which date from upwards of four years. Such to superior suff ordy has not been necessary at Damisseus since 1863, when remain abused to appeal against his Excellency Rushits Postas. The present state of affairs is causing perfound descriptation amongst limitshould protegés, and seriously injuring English interests in this part of the East. I authorities are deaf to all the calls of justice, and they are supported by his breetle the Wall, Mohammed Rashal Paska. The object is contently to ignore all foreign tion, and more expressity to lower, as in selt as possible, the influence of European

The three claims first mentioned date from the days before my taking charge of this Consulate. I have exercised all possible patience in the matter, and have firstly given to it my time and labour, hardly a week line possed without my making an effort to procure justice. At last it has become evident to me that the repeated promises hy word of mouth, by letter, and by telegram were unde only to be broken, and that the rights of British subjects and protogra will be withheld until your Excellency thinks proper to press for their being granted. I need hardly point out that my determination to procure from the local Covernment payment of its lawful debts is most destasted a to his Execulency the Governor-General and to all his subordinates. They cannot view with pleasure so large a sum diverted into the pockets of foreign protégées, and they oppose me by all means, direct and indirect. The latter is, of course, the favourite tactic

With respect to the claims Nos. 3 and 4, Vixirial letters were forwarded by your Excellency, and in several of my despatches (for instance, those of January 24, March 13, and June 13, 1871) I have explained what has been their fate. Both distruments purporting to be "orders for the settlement of those claims," and thus represented to your Excellency, were ambiguous, and were evidently written under the usual influence at Constantinople. I need hardly say that, even had they been satisfactory, the usual secret sign would have made them of no avail.

The Vizirial letters having failed to produce any effect, I have the honour of submitting to your Excellency the following plan for obtaining an equitable settlement of the claims in question, and to suggest that the amount, which may reach 6,000,000 phatres, justifies an exceptional measure. The only way to secure justice would be by appointing a Commission of two or three members, ordered in Constantinople to sit at Beyrout, where they would be less liable to be saffuenced than at Daniascus. The Commercial Tribunal of Reyrout would, I doubt not, depute, if requested to do so, three European members to associate themselves, upon equal ferms, with the Commismoners. The Consulate could name a dragoran who would look to the interests of the to pro- pro- contract to the c . .

List of long-pending British Claims presented at different times to Rashid Pusha.

1. M Yakuh Stambouli, Jewish protected subject.—The case of this chaimant mit to the a leaf and land, by the local Government, which but repeatenly refused to fulfil its solemn engagements. It has often been reported and commented apon, especially by Mr Count Rogers (January 2, 1869), and by Mr. Acting Consul Wood (July 16, 1868). The amount presented to this Consulate as far back as December 6, 1869, amounted to 3,573,975 pirates, to which interest and compound interest are now saided.

2. Mr Honomey Dragoman Hanna Misk, whose clasm to his village of Rasyah was forwarded in my official letters of October 6, 1870, and of June 9, 1871. I have repeatedly referred to the local Government, and, on one occasion, Mr. Consul-Goneral Eldridge and I waited upon his Excellency the Governor-General in order to plend the cause; but nothing has been done, and, after promise upon promise, the case is simply

8. Mr. Telmina Fuchs, Jewish protected subject.-This claim has been more than once reported by me, especially in my despotches of November 16, 1870, and of June 21, 1871. The amount in June 1871 was 624,439 pastres. This case was supposed to have been settled by the Vizinal letter of Ramazan 26, A H. 1287, but the document merely directed that the claim be raised from Bedouin plunderers, who have already been stripped, in the claimant's name, of all their property

4. Mesurs. Finxi, Barbour, and Co., an Anglo-Belgian house, established at St Jean d'Acre.-Their claim was undertaken by me in November 1809, pursued by Mr Consol-General Eldridge, and reported by me in No. 13 of June 27, 1871 On January 4 1870, the amount was 225,000 pastres, to which must be added interest at the rate of 18 per cent, per annum. This case was also supposed to have been settled by the Vinirial letter, dated Shubah 18, A.H. 1286 (February 25, 1871). But, instead of ordering the ex-Governor of Acre, Mahommed Bey el Yusuf, who authorized the heads of villages to ignore their debts, and who thus rusned the firm, to pay the sums with whose recouping he had maliciously interfered, the document confuses the demands from the villagers with the demands from the ex-Governor. Moreover, it does not mention the sum due, nor does it order any inquiry to be made into the case of Mesara. 5. M. Yusuf Smuliali, Jewish-protected subject .- This claim upon certain Bedawin who had plundered his camels close to Damaseus, was reported by me to the local Government in November 1963, and lastly on May 23, 1871. The amount is now a total of 15,300 pantres.

Amongst minor claims are the following con-

1. That of Sulyman of Haddad, the Enginh counter from Haghdad, plundered by the Ruwalia Bedawin of goods valued at 661 ghazis (see 16 napoleons 10 frames), and reported by me to the local Government on January 10, 1870, and lastly on May 23,

June 24, 1871

3. M. Hoods Agar, Designman to this Consulate.-On the 22nd June, 1871, the Gluyas Bedawin and others attacked his village Suwaydob, and physicised from a 700 milities of bariey, valued at 7,700 plastres. After I had made representations, his Excellency the Walt sent certain inspectors to estimate the duringe done, and those persons, by threatening the Sheakla of the neighbouring villages with the vengeance of the Bedawin, secured testimony to the effect that the less was only 120 midds, and that the plunder was the work of the wild boars.

I also accompanied Capta a Burton for the few days that he was in the Hauran, nd was present at every interview, long or short, that he had with any of the Druges. On one oexisten his advice was noked respecting the course of action they ought to pursue. He shortly replied that they must submit to the Turkish Government, and that it would be misdness to oppose it. To this they agreed. number polities were never touched upon. Our trip to the Haumu was simply devoted to geographical and antiquarian researches, but at the same time we naturally desired ne of the people, and Captain Burton, not wishing to be away from Damaseus

Again the sentence, "Quelques una des domostopies furent legérement blessés," can outr be stigmatized as a he, which the Walt has since tried to prove true by the testimony of two self-entitled doctors, whose testimony is so abuild as to prove its own falsehood. Two of the servants by for several days unable to more, and one continued to spit blood till after his return to Damaseus. The Kawass, an Afghancomplained to me (as I mentioned in my letter to Sir II Elliot) of being severely struck in the group, but was too brave to lay up for it. Since the date of that letter he has been near death's door with a very bad gangrened rupture (I speak as an eye-witness). but is imposity now recovering.

The felogram goes on to state that extenuating elecanistances are found in the fact that the attack upon the Consul's person was not made with arms. Large stones, however, when thrown by a mob of 100 to 150 men, at a distance of a few feet, are weapons of offence and to be despised. The only wonder I can feel is that none of our party were killed

As regards the exaction made by the Consul for the prisoners to be taken to Damasens, I beg deferentially to suggest that it was in the power of the Turkish authornies to refuse to accode to Captain Burton's request if it were not or right, and I think it cannot but suggest itself as a snare set by his Excellency Rashal Paxha.

I HAVE the bonour to forward to your Excellency the copy of a letter yesterday received by me

The Rev. Mr. Zeller, of the Protestant Moscon, is one of the oldest resident. Sprin, and is a man highly respected on account of the moderation of his opinions and the constancy which he has dopphyed in a somewhat difficult task.

I venture to observe to your Excellency that this gentleman's written testimony corroborates and confirms the statements made by a fellow-traveller, Mr. C. F. Tyrwh.

Mr Northey, having left the party before they gave their witness in presence of the Crammal Tribunal of Damoseus

I pon my return to this city I reported to the Governor-General the police arrangements which appeared necessary at Nazareth, but I need hardly add that my report was not even naticed

The latins are now in a minority at Nazareth, and the Greeks have become the petty tymats of the place. I am the first European that they have growly associted, out few have passed through Nazareth without being reliked by them; and did travellers understand the foul and maniting language used to them, there would be tracible any time a carryon halfs there.

Damases, July 15, 1871

I HAVE the benome to by the following encumstances before your Excellence to be favoured with your orders as to the course of action which Her Mayesty's ment would wish me to pursue in a matter which is evidently of the greatest

The mal-administration of Syria during the last five years, especially the last two of Rauliol Pashu's Government, is enuous a revival of Christianity hence the Moslem is the only subject of the Porte who has no defender unless his purse be well lined. The so-called "Greak" Christiania are backed, especially at the present time, by Russian althorics and gold. The Latina receive support from their exclassions and from the Latina receive support from their exclassions and from the Latina receive support from their exclassions and from the Protestaria and the Drown look to England for that help and sympathy which her Protestaria and the Drown look to England for that help and sympathy which her policy has whely extended to them. The Jews either obtain the protection of foreign prosperis, or they only one the influence of those increasionate throughout the circlased world. But the Moslem Rayyah cannot look to any of these sources for plundered, crushed, starved, and driven to despair by taxes and imports, and by exactions of capacies the taxes of the privileges ergoyed by the increase states of the privileges ergoyed by the increase matter, he has at length borned to ency the privileges ergoyed by the increase which he cannot expect. Et Islam will not help burs—Christiania and his pasture which he cannot expect.

As long as the present and-administration keeps the people starring and discontented, so long will this movement, now that it has made a start, continue to care affinence; and, if freedom be allowed to it, it is bard to foresee where it may I am at present imprepared to supply a full and exhaustive Report upon the subject Much of my information, though to all appearance reliable, must be verified by me a person before I can vouch for its truth; ret I have thought it my duty to by he your Excellency this outline of a revival which is working under the surface of scenety, and of the causes which have brought it about, in order that no time may be lost in preparing for its development.

The reveral dates from 1869, when a private soldier, then named Ahmeden-Sahar, and now loss, became a Christian, and when-motwithslanding the proclamation of religious likerty to converts by the Hatt-i-Sherif of Gal-khanah, and the confirmation by the Firman of February 12, 1352 1 was reversed and boded with chanal vectoring to his own account, he saw visious of the Saviour, and he was favoured with various revelations; his fetters fell off, and his juders did not attempt to replace them. When released, he was joined by twenty to thirty Moderns of the Shadil-Order of Devision. Of these men, twelve were arrested, and uninvarily deported, without formal trial, to Tripoli and Murruk, whilst their wives and children, then humbering sixty-two, and now fifty-three, were left to starve in Damascus. As usual, persecution increased the number of converts, who, though accretly haptered, have succeeded in concealing their change of faith. Now, is wever, for douppersones of Said el Hamawi; the case of Haj Hasta, the hanging of Arif Effendi (the mosphyte r) and ti

For some time we has beard that a Moslem convert to Protest: had been subjected to considerable persecution. A convert, more obscure than himself, had been put out of the way, and luid not been heard of, and Liussan had been subj to a series of arrests and imprisonments, and had several times narrowly escapassassination. You have thus vindicated the cause of harmonity, for on the day on which the prisoner escaped, through your intervention, the Moslem authorites strangled, in the Great Mosque, in Damascus, a Modern convert to Christianity. The man had made application to the Irish-American Musica for protection, and declared that he lived in ly fear of strangulation. He was impresented in the Grand Mosque, and strangled, as they say, by John the Baptist, and then carried away by one man and thrown into a hole, like a dog. This set proves that your uncompromising firmness with the authorities was an act of force merely, and that the worst apprehensions of the Beyrout foreconstruct were not unfrapped.

But, more important still, you have asserted the binding character of the spiritual privileges of the Christian subjects of the Porte, contained in the Pirman of 1856, and which, according to Pand Pacha's letter to Lord Stratford do Rodelillo "oabsolutely all proselytes.

I have, de BICHARD F. BURTON

Consul Burton to Earl Granville .- (Received August 1).)

Separate.) My Lord, Domascus, July 24, 1871.

Il IVING been informed non-officially that it is in contemplation to reduce Her Majesty's Consulate at Damasens,-in fact, to make it a second class appointment,-I am induced to submit the following lines to your superior judgment.

The capital of Syria, owing to increased wouth, to the influx of population, and to the establishment of majlises, which make it their head-quarters, has doubled its prices in the last fifteen years. House-rout is now 60% to 80% per annum, and it must seen one to 100%. A Consular Dragaman will, in the present day, spend some 300 to 350 napoleons a-year, where his father lived as well upon 120.

t spoid Consul, who remost afford from his private means an outlay equal to his official income, will now occupy a false position at the resonance of the Governortremeral, of the Grand Courts of Appeal, and of the other high officials. And this is precisely what is desired by that Ottoman party which hates European influence because it is an obstacle to their freedom of mal-administration. Its one great object is to keep the Consulates-General relogated to the port of Beyrout and on the edge, as opposed to the centre, of the Vilayet, to a place of minimum publical importance never risited by the Governor-General, except when making he

-A , as a burbone town comparatirely thexpensive because no establishment need be unitetamed—an underpaid official would be removed from the many temptations that would beset his path at Dannesens. The transfer of the Consulates General and the Vice-Consulate to the capital is a step which, as every resident in Syris well knows, has long been called for by European interests. It will, perhaps, be distrateful to the Consula-General, who find Revrout a safe and civilized dwelling-place in the immediate neighbourhood of the sea, and of the "the n' (Lebason). These functionaries of course I do not include my dameall their interest to establish at Dannaseus Vice-t subject to themselves. Thus they have prepared a measure at once most agreeable to the local authorities, whose jeniousy of European influence is ever on the mercase, and fatal to the beneficial influence which harope ought to exercise upon be separated by two days of roug free and regular communication with the Home authorities. Now all is changed There is a telegram office which sends messages in Karopean languages; there is a post-office which will presently learn to forward correspondence unviolated; and there te a day-coach throughout the year, with a night omnthus in the hat senson. No plausible reason at present exists for the Consul-General to reside at Beyrout, except are personal convenience, and no public servant will allow any weight to such a consideration. Many of the Conside-General may feel mediated to unge ofquetions against being transferred to Damaseus; but should the Representative of Great Britain be directed to make the capital his head-quarters, all will be compelled at once to do the same, under pain of injuring the interests of their Governments.

In the days when the French read did not exist, a cause for placing the Countle-General at Beyrout was found in the fact that they were also accredited to the Governor of the Lebanon, as well as to the Governor-General of Syens. But the former functionary now transacts business not at Beyrout, which belongs to Damasons, but at Banboleh during the minter, and in the summer as Diteditio, a place for less access ble from Reyrout than Damascus is. A accond-class Consulate could do all that is wanted with the Governor of the Lelmon, which is a Mutasarrithk (Department), not g valayet (province). Finally, the distances are so inconsiderable that the Consul-General could at all times reach Boabdoh in twelve hours and Inteddin in twenty-four hours Crom Danuseus

The present, I venture to authors, is the moment when Syria claims increased attenfrom England. The Emplicates Valley Railroad, after having been discussed surre-, has now come before a Committee of the House of Commons. It will be opposed ie forermment of Syria secretly, but with all its strength; and the opposition of al authorntes will be supported by the Sublime Porte and by Russia. These two Powers are the last to desire an English highway from the Lerent to the Eupliestes. And without the most energetic action on our part they will inevitably be successful.

The first step requisite to clear the way for a Euphrates Valley Radrond is to 100 to our Consular establishment in Syria and Palestone, a step which has already A.c., taken by France, Russin, Austria, and even Persia. They have placed Representatives at all the most important points, a secure method of extending legitimate European suffuence, by bringing to light and checking the malpractices, the peculation, and the abuse of justice which cut into the prosperity of the province. The measure is generally impopular with the Consuls-General and Consuls, because it always adds to their correspondence, and it occasionally causes trouble with the local authorities. Such considerations need hardly be noticed

I have the honour respectfully to submit the following plan for extending our Consular parisdiction throughout Syria and Palestine; and I would invite your Lordship's attention to the fact that it will not require an increase of expenditure

The Consular corps of Great Britain is at present represented by a Comer - terat Reyrout; by Consuls at Damasous and Jerusalem; by unpaid Vice-Consuls at Latakia, Tripoli, Sidon, and Julia, and by Comular Agenta at the port of Tripoli, and at St. Jean d'Acre. The Vice-Consulates and the Consular Agencies might be left in statu que until vacated by the actual holders. They should then be replaced by unpaid Consider Dragomano-a step which might at once be taken to advantage chosen from the wealthiest and the most influential natives; and Protestants, who in many towns are roung to distraction, should be especially preferred. There is nothing derogatory in the title of Corsular Drugoman, which the French F . . . To the state of

The said gain of the change would be, that whereas in choosing a Vice-Consul or at moder Agent we are now compelled by Treaty to take a non-subject of the Portenifting all white i unitable persons who are not already employed by other nations, we can been we I. any objection which might be offered is, that the number of Drugomans attached t the Consulate-beneral, the two Consulates, the four Vice-Consulates, and the two t a ulations to four, three, and two respectively and the list is never a prot ment of Jernsal - - W at Damascus in allowed an under ted number

The Consular Dragoroaus should be permitted to fly their flags without expect . . a salute, which at the inland ports cannot be returned, and they should be restricted to establ sument computing of our interpretor (ana-drogman or eleve drogman), and etto man man a galar e y Consul-General, and the inter should visit them in person, or, if numble houself to mak the tour of inspection, by deputy, at least once every two years. This is a precaution of such importance that Her Majosty's Foreign Office would be justified in defraying the octual travelling expenses of the Comul-General

The places where Consular Drogomono are required are:-

It will, however, be far better to station an efficial at each of these great centres, in view of the immense changes which will be introduced to their vicinity by Viloyet of Zor, by the settlement of Bedawi, and by the t prepasanti colonization.

Thus Syen will again be made to feel British influence—an influence which, of the years, has so declined that the Commilar Dragoman of 1850 had more authority the Consul of 1871. The Province will, by this measure, be prepared for an event that shall give her new life, the laying down of the Euphratea Valley Railroad. Thus, too, we shall counterbalance the present preponderating influence of Russia, whose progress through the Greek Church is rapid and sure, and we shall give to Protestantiam that support which in Syria and Palestine it so much needs

That the local Government, as now constituted, will offer the sturdiest opposition to a change which tends to establish British interests, political, commercial, and social, *pon the soundest footing, my own personal knowledge of its policy does not permit me to doubt. But the opposition will be factions and destitute of the second secon must therefore succumb to the first serious effort on the part of Her M yesty's Government. Damarcus, June 18, 1871.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the recept of your Excellency's despatch No. 4 of June 8, 1871," and to reply to it paragraph by paragraph.

I deeply regret that my Report of the assault at Auxaneth was not sent to you before, the delay, as has been explained, grove from the dangers of the Turkish post, and from a desire to forward the once in a complete force

Until the last few days I have been expecting a personal rist, with a written apology, from the Bishop of Nazareth. He began with an attempt to suborn four Modern witnesses, unhappily not one of them was in Nazareth at the time who I'm proposed that they should persure themselves—a copy of his letter from St. Jean d Acre was duly forwarded to me. At Dannascus he has openly adoutted the untruth of his statements, declaring that he was compelled to make them by his flock, who forbade burn to return unless he would carry them through the affair harmless. He has limited his danger from personal violence and his fear that his followers would turn Protestante.

Smen the date of my last despatch, however, the Bishop of Nazarchi has been encouraged at the Seesa to withdraw all offers of conciliation, and I have been comrelied to urge a trul upon the local authorities. Your Excellency may be pleased to car that my proceedings have been thoroughly approved by his Enumence the Greek If tearch of Danascus, and I have reason to think that the same is the case with his Excellency the Greek Patriarch of Jerusalem. I then took the revolver from him, and as three stones had struck me, though partially sheltered by a tree, I fired also in the xir. Many men, it may be asserted, when exposed to be brained by a Syran fellah, would have shot the aggressor. Not one of our assistants, however, was " named, even by a stone. The ringlesders of the riot were severely punished by the authorities, and not one complained against the youth. I pay more than usual attention in this part of the world to the hearing of my followers, and lately I domissed one of them for speaking y to a priest. It may be then tomed that one of the men most severely beaten at Sagareth was my cook, a Greek rayah, and that since my return to Damascus, he has been tampered with and begged to give false witness.

Alcih, Mount Lebanon, August 11, 1871. I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith a copy of a note which I have received from his Excellency the Governor-General of Syria, complaining of the conduct of Mr Hanna Azar, one of the Dragomans of Her Majesty's Consulate at Damascus.

On several previous occasions the misconduct of Mr. Azar has been mentioned to me both by the Wali and others. I believe Mr Wood, while Acting Consul, found it necessary to suspend him until the arrival of Captain Burton

As the appointment of Dragomans to Consulates depends upon the incumbents of the posts themselves, I do not consider myself authorized to interfere in the matter further than referring it to your Excellency, and in this sense I have answered the note of Rashid Paslar.

I have furnished Captain Burton with a copy of the Governor-General's note, and have suggested to hun, for the sake of preserving good relations with the local authorities, the expediency of suspending Mr Azar from his functions at least until the charges brought against him have been investigated by Captain Burton.

IN continution of my despatch of the 16th ultimo, I have the how at to ashin the your Excellence the following particulars

Having protected, in the name of the British-protected Jews of Tiberian, against the gad rate of ground containing a synagogue and a countery, which they had proved to have been their property for centuries, I received on July 13 a note, marked particulars, from his Excellency Rashid Pasha, informing me that the case has be a unitted to the local tribunals.

On August 2, after allowing a remonable time to clapse, and wishing to resource the Jews of Tiberam, whose many letters showed that they expected the worst results, sited M. Awadys, deagonair of this Consulate, to wait upon the flowers.

And to request an official answer to my despatch. The result may be given in the words of M. Awadys:—

pe me aus presenté cher sou Excellence le Wali, pour la celative à l'officre de la sympogne de Tiberias. Le Wali mu dit avec un ton truté, 'd'ai dejà répondu à M. le Consul sur le propos en lui donnt que je men occuperat; pourquoi donc revient di sur la même question?' The case in question directly concerns the dearest interests of British protected Jews, who have memorialized for Moses Montefore and other officential members of their community upon the subject. Yet his Excellency does

FOREWARNED will not be forcarmed in this case, for the mischief is half done already by the actions of Her Majesty's Government

I came to Stran in February last with a special mosion from the Palestine Explosion to the form the length and breath of the land, and this, with accord years' previous acquaintance with the East, enables me to see more of the real state of the country than falls to the lot of the ardinary tourist.

In the early spring I found Syra in an almost abnormal state of excitences, it is agreed many contact. That excitement has gone on mercusing, chickly for five reasons. 1. The injustice and reports of the Governor-General (Wall), Mohammed Rashad Pacha, who now amogoruras Syria. 2. The agitation kept up by Egypt, with whom Syria and the Governor sympath. It is a mally and with alicen each was act the moment opportunity offers. 3. The rum of the personner, enabled by exorbitant taxes, starved by a bad season, and devoured by Jewish money landers. 4. The way in which the Wall pita sect against sect for his own political ends; and in this land, where party feeling rums so high, nothing is easier. And, 5. The strong Christian movement, none the less strong for being under the surface—this has already been noticed in some English papers.

There was but one man in Syria who both saw and protested against the many and charme note of marest on done by the Wall, and this was Her Britannie Majesty's, the dark learner Captain R. F. Burton, whom Her Maputy's Foreign Office have thought fit to remove, giving car to the tale raised two years ago by certain missionsries and others that Moslem fanaticiam was working against him. Knowing the people and the country as well as I do, I heatate not one moment to say that this is a deliberate he (and am ready to prove it such) invented by Captain Burton's enemies. Parar for a little or a new and the water were, Mulann medians and Metawell, Greek Catholics and Syrians, Protestants and Latins. He racited and was visited by the religious Sheiklis, and especially by the Emir Abd-el-Kader of Algerine fame. This prince is looked upon as the hader of Mohammedan religion here. These facts are sufficient to show how false is the plea of Captain Burton's being smalle to deal with Mohammedans on account of their fanstiersm Only to-day I have heard numbers of Moslems deplace his removal, which pleased but the Wali and his creatures, and a few Jows engaged in notarious usury I dwell upon these points, as I feel convenced that unless his successor be a man of his stampwhich will be hard to find—he will sink to that state of subserviency to the Wak to what has been shed by the will be bard to find the wall of the English Consul was the only man of independence; but now that Syrin is becoming of rital importance to us on account of the Euphratea Valley Railroad our name and presige must go through Her Majesty's Euphratea Valley Railroad of a Turkich pacha, the only man fit to represide most efficient of Her Majesty's Consular Officers, will feel that most other k has malpractices; the pensantry, sooner or later, must use now that her most of resolute men of all classes, and we must be prepared for the worst. I renture to product that he are many months have passed the troubles of Syria will have drawn upon her the eyes of Europe, and when blood has been shed England will use the error she has committed in throwing her influence here to the dogs and obeying the wishes of Rashid Pashs.

Majorty's Consulate, Damascus, by his Excellency Mohammed Roshid Parks, Cloverne General of Syria, has been forwarded to Her Majorty's Embassy, Constantinople, 1 have replied to these charges, and I have the honour to report to your Lordship as follows.

M Asar, who, after some five years service, obtained from that office the most satisfactory testimonials. It is equally false that Me Acting Consul Charles Wood looked upon M Azar as a "stone of semidal," had be done so, he would not, before his departure, have given this Drugoman the best of characters. Me Kennedy considered only a few days at Damascus, and if he heard of anything "deplorable" on the part of M Azar it was from the Governor-General languald. Rash at Pusha america that he has more than once taken the opportunity of complaining to me against M Azar. He used east him, it is true, all manner of private and irregular interession, but until quite of late he never made an open and honest compliant in a public and official form knowing the Governor-General's personal antipathy to M. Azar. I suggested to the later that on such receives as visits, for instance, he had befor absent himself. The e reports" spread by M. Asar were not heard by nor reported to me, and if they related to the "perils of Chrostanes" and to "reports of fresh masfortunes," it will not. I fear, be long before such reports will be justified. There was no "quarrel upon the occasion of my going to the church of Zildani," I was never there. During the riot in question, when my wife was insulted, I was, as the Governor-General well a ufficiently paneled, interceded for them. The head of the family, Salih Bey to family name, not a titles, when examined by me touching any charges which he might have against M. Asar, swore upon the Koran be had none, and made a similar deposition before the chief tribunal at Danmacus, called Tamyig el Hukok el Vilayet.

M. Agar resited the fribitant only by my order. So far from being on bad terms with the members he is a fatourste with all who dare to be likefriends. He more than one occase at defended the dignity of his office, and he dul right than of Mr. Richard Wood and Colonel Rose (Lord Strathoners) the Governor-to ousular Dragouna entered the mora and would order for him pages and coffee Those times are changed. It is only lately that M. Jihan Abd el Kuri. Consular Dragounan to the Vice-Consulate of Greece in Damaseus, was ignoralized without reason turned out of Coset, and of course his Vice-Consul did not date to complain. No tribunal would not thus without the express order of the Governor-teneral but that is a part of his syst

I am personally satisfied that Rashid Pasin line, through the Glaza B threatened the life of M. Arar, and I am equally certain that the "imaginary plus attributed by his Excellency's instruments to "wild page," is a fact. This was reported by one to Her Majesty's Embassy, Constantinople. I did not, however, explain that these Ghass plunderers, who are allowed almost every week to ride and harry the Danussus plain, have for some time past given hostages to the local Governor, and that consequently their rands, as oil at Danussus know, are directed and controlled by the Governor forward.

Rashal Pasha has, perhaps, not exceeded his powers in forbidding the tribunal to admit M Azar. He has dismissed, his friends assert, three Consuls, and he must find it on cosy task to deal with a Consular Dragoman. But I hope, for the homour of the English name, that before Her Majesty's Consulate at Damaseus sauctions this perverse and illegal measure, it will give M Azar a fair and open trial. M Azar courts the freest overstantion of the charges brought against hira, and has no doubt that, if the proceedings be properly conducted, he will be found guittless.

Rushid Pasha, after taking a step which noght to satisfy even his vindictive forings, still poshes the line against M. Azar. The fact is, he wishes to take away British and then to runn, a Consular Dragoman who has dared to do his duty reported to Her Majesty's Embassy at Constantinople, M. Asar, before I are at Dragoscia, convicted the Governor-General, in presence of Mr. Acting Consul Charles Wood, of a wilful falsehood for interested purposes. Rashid Pasha has him, and never will, he cannot be satisfied with anything short of run-

It remains only for me to dony explicitly that M. Axar has ever " irritated and excited" me against the present Governor-General of Syra. The latter's open refusal of redress to British protegés, and his opposition to all legitimate Consular induction systematically displayed during the last twenty months, are sufficient to " irritate and public servant who would do his dut M. Azor is a man of good family and of sufficient menns. Since 1805 he has given all his time to his duties without receiving a farthing of pay, and he has shown a zen' not an intelligence combined with a far rarer quality, an independent hearing, which have a comthe hatred of the Governor-General. He is the only Dragoman who has a thorough knowledge of law and custom, and of the proceedings of the native tribunals, and during the last twenty months I have found his services invaluable. It remains only to be seen, now that I have been "replaced," whether a public servant of six years standing will obtain a fair and important trial, or will be left to the fate prepared for him by a Governor-General who, like Rashid Pasha, abuses his high position and the confidence of his Government with the view of crushing all opposition. And should the latter succeed in corrying out his project, the only persons who will consent to act as Drugoman to Her Mejecty's Consulate, or to any other Consulate at Damaseus, will be simply the tool of the Governor-Coneral, allowed freely to take bribes, and to indulge in any kind of malpraettee as the price of betraying their employers. My Lord, Therapia, November 6, 1871.

IN the beginning of September Mr. Tyrwhit Drake sent me the letter of which the copy is inclosed, respecting the trial of the persons implicated in the Nazareth affeny. Although it would have been more regular on the part of Captain Burton to have left the superintendence of the proceedings to Her Majesty's Consular Officers, I did not think it expedient to make any difficulties in affording Mr. Drake every assistance in acting for him; and I inclose copies of the answer which I returned to him, and of an instruction to Mr. Consul-General Eldridge, directing him to afford Mr. Drake every assistance he might wish to have.

I have now received from Mr. Eldridge the despatch, of which I have the honour to inclose a copy, in reply to my communication.

From it, and from the inclosure from Mr. Jago, your Lordship will observe that Her Majesty's Consul-General and the Acting Consul at Damascus having been to the last kept in ignorance of oversthing connected with that occurrence, it has been impossible for me to have much light thrown upon it through their agency.

Mr. Drake's letter botrays a wish to rake up grievances which Mr. Eldridge and

Mr. Jugo do not appear to consider to have a cent existence.

I have, &c. (Signed) HENRY ELLIOT.

Mr. Drake to Sir H. Ellist.

Damasrus, September 11, 1671.

1N a despatch, Separate, dated the 20th ultimo," addressed to your Excellency by Capiain Burton, he expressed a wish that I should not as his agent in pursuing the Nazareth business.

As yet I have not been able to obtain the official marbatah of the Court at Akka, and your Excellency knows the Report furnished by Captain Burton's agents, Messes. Final and Burtour, of that place.

* Inchespe I in No. 70.

I applied some twenty days ago to Mr. Jago, then in charge of Her Majesty's Consulate here, to obtain the decision from the Serai. The Wali promised that, as soon as he received it, he would forward it; but, as your Excellency knows, the promises of this man are worse than valueless. His agent, Ottoman Bey Mardum Bey, returned to Damaseus on August 31. The Wali left that night suddenly for Beyrout, and on the 5th instant Mr. Jago left for Alcib. There are now only diagonaus left in charge of Her Majesty's Consulate, and, of course, no business of importance like this can be done, especially as Mr. Hasif Mashekah, who is now left, and has been in charge several times during the Consulation of Mr. Rogers and Captain Burton, is in very bad health, and can seldern, if ever, come to the office.

I am not the only person who has to lament this state of things; but the complaint is general, and it would be curious—if it were not humiliating—to observe how low

English influence has sunk since Captain Burton's departure.

On the day of his (Captain Burton's) leaving Damaseus, the Wali attempted to arrest the leaders of the secret Christians, who have turned from Mahammedanism but not openly declared themselves, but, owing to the counageous attitude taken by M. Awadys, dragonan of Her Majesty's Cansulate, the matter because too public for extreme measures.

On August 23rd the Protestant missionaries at Rushegga were prevented from putting an inclosing wall to their school-house. Mr. Jago presured two orders from the Serai, purporting to be to the effect that the building should go on, but in reality they were uncless. An order of this kind is even worse than useless, for it gives the natives opportunity to laugh in the heards of the English, who are now sinking to the political level of Greece and Spain in this country.

I shall be glad if your Excellency will inform me what course I had better pursue with regard to the Nazareth affair. I may and that the Protestants at Nazareth have been seriously annoyed by the exultant Greeks, whose Bishop beasts everywhere that he has discussed the English Consul. The Wall, too, takes this net to himself, but only gains credence with the ignorant, for he is universally excernted and detested by all seepscially by the Moslems, who respected and admired Captain Burton, and from whose chiefs and religious Sheikhi I have received more than twenty letters to forward to Captain Burton, arging him to return, if not for his own good, for that of Syria.

reference to the Nazareth business than was contained in that despatch.

Upon learning from it that the trial of the persons implicated in the affray was to be heard on appeal at Damascus. I at once requested and obtained from the Porte an order that the case should be thoroughly and impartially inquired into, and that those who were known to have taken part in an attack upon Her Majesty's Cousai should be duly punished.

Instructions were at the same time given to Her Majesty's Acting Consul, whose duty it will be to see that the matter is properly dealt with; and Mr. Consul-General Eldridge will give you any information which you may desire as agent for Captain Burton, of whose exact position in reference to the persons on trial I am not sware.

It was satisfactory to me to find from your letter that none but the ignorant consider Captain Burton's recall to have been the act of the late Wall, and his successor being enjoined to cultivate good relations with Her Majesty's Consulate, it may be hoped that the late differences may shortly be forgotten.

I have, &c.

Sir H. Elliot to Consul-General Eldridge.

Therapia, September 26, 1871. I INCLOSE the copy of a letter which I have received from Mr. Tyrwhit Drake, and the answer, under flying wai, which I have returned to him.

Although I am unacquainted with the object for which he is acting as Captain Burton's agent, I have to request you to give him any information which he may wish in reference to the trial of the persons implicated in the Nazareth affray. I have to request you to give me any information in your power in reference to the intended arrest of the Christian leaders, and to the impediments to the buildings of the Protestant schools alluded to by Mr. Droke. I have, &c.

Inclosure 4 in No. 88.

Consol-General Eddridge to Sir H. Elliot.

Beyrout, October 23, 1871. I HAVE the honour to receive your Excellency's despatch of the 20th ultimo, transmitting to me a copy of a letter addressed to you by Mr. Drake, and the enswer under flying seal.

As I was ignorant, till I received your despatch, that Mr. Drake was acting as agent for Captain Burton with respect to the Nazareth affray, concerning which, except what I received from your Excellency, I was without any reliable information, neither did I know anything of the intended arrest of the Christian leaders, nor of the impediments to the buildings of the Protestant schools alluied to by Mr. Drake; I therefore applied to Mr. Acting Consul Jago for information on these subjects, and I have now the honour to inclose a copy of the Report of that gentleman, which, according to my humble judgment, explains them satisfactorily, and I trust it will meet with your Excellency's approval.

The aliasions of Mr. Drake to the humiliation brought upon the English influence a Syris by the recall of Captain Burton (whose personal influence must have been prodigious if his absence was so severely feit in three weeks) I pass without further notice.

For the absence of Mr. Jago from Damascus, which Mr. Drake mentions, I am entirely responsible. Mr. Jugo was sent to Damascus at the most unleastly season of the year; he was, from the uncertainty as to the length of his stay, obliged to take up his quarters at the hotel, which is situated in the worst part of the town. consequently, both he and his servants except severe fevers, which were unusually permissions this season. I therefore invited him to stay in Mount Lebanon, in order to shake off the disease he had contracted, which was impossible so long as he remained at the liotel at Damisous.

Mr. Jago, after a stay with me of ten days, entirely recovered, and returned to Daznasiwan

I have the honour further to transmit, for your Excellency's information, a copy of s despatch which I have received from Mr. Jego," reporting the refusal of the Rev. Mr. Wright to accept a Government escort during a journey be has undertaken through the desort to the north-cast of Damascus.

I have forwarded a copy of this despatch to Earl Connville, as it will serve as a practical proof that Mr. Wright is not apprehensive of any danger, whatever his friends in England may think.

I have, &c. (Signed) S. JACKSON ELDRIDGE.

Acting Convul Jugo to Consul-General Ridridge.

Damascus, October 20, 1871. I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch doted the 17th instant, inclosing the copy of a despaten which you have received from Her Mojesty's Ambacodes, containing as inclosure, the copy of a letter addressed to his Excellency by Mr. Tyrwhit Drake, and you request me to furnish you with a Report on the matters mentioned in Mr. Drake's letter.

With regard to the Nagareth business, the only application which I have received on the subject is a request from Mr. Drake to be furnished with a copy of the maxbatta of the Nazareth and Aero Tribunals; this I have obtained; but, as Mr. Drake left Damaseus on the 2nd instant, I am noable to deliver it, not knowing where he is to be found. I was not aware that he was acting as Captain Burton's agent in the matter till the 26th September, when he mentioned the fact in a written application for the marketta, and until the receipt of your present despatch I was ignorant that his reason for asking for it was commeted with any introntion or wish of Captain Burton to pursue the ease, or that such intention or wish existed,

With reference to the intended arrest of the se-called Christian leaders, I have to state that a few days after my arrival in Damascus, Mr. Anedis, one of the Drugomans of the Convelete, came to me late at night, and informed me that one Table Effendi Maradi, a Moslem Damascene, who, he asserted, had secretly become a Christian, was passing his boose that evening in company with a friend one Sahar, also alleged to be a secret Christian, when they stopped to speak to him in the street; that two zaptiehs came up and arrested them for a breach of a Municipal regulation; that he remonstrated with them for arresting the men so near his draw, and ended by inviting Tabler and his companion into his homes; that the police thus folled, communicated with their chief. who marched down a large body of men into the Christian quarter and occupied the streets leading to the house; that they made no attempt to invade his damicile, but remained in waiting until he had obtained my instructions in the matter. In reply to my queries, Mr. Anedia informed me that Takir Efferdi had some time before repursed to him, under a solemn promise of secreey, the fact of his being a Christian and had also pointed out his commanion Sahar as being one; that the fact was kept a profound secret from all, and that therefore he did not connect their arrest with it, as the authorities were necessarily imported of their change of faith. I told Mr. Anedia that he was wrong in sheltering the men from the police under any circumstances; that there were other means more efficacions of accuring protection from oppression when such existed, which, however, by his own showing did not seem to be the case in the present instance. I reminded him that only a few months before, a criminal fleeing. from justice, and who land been permitted to take refuge in the British Consulate in the absence of Her Majesty's Count, had succeeded in thereby making his compe and evading punishment, and that the matter had given rise to the just complaint of the authorities.

I directed him to decline harbouring the men any longer; this he did. They were arrested and conveyed to prison, and next morning, when I sent to inquire into the nature of the charge against them, I found that they had been liberated after an interrogation, which, according to their own statement, was limited to the charge of being abroad without a lanters.

Mr. Anedis is an Armenian Cathelie of Damascue; he is a simple, well-meaning man, but is much influenced by the Perc Naggian, the Superior of the Lazzarist Convent here, a person addicted to secret prosclytizing. By his agency Mr. Amelis made the acquaintance of Takir Effendi, and became the recipient, in some degree, of the secrets and views of a party alleged to have secretly turned from Islam to Christianity.

He was requested by Her Majesty's late Consul, according to his own statement, to inquire into the so-called Christian movement in Ikamaseus, and I cannot dispussess my mind of the belief, after much research into a matter involved in much obscurity, that his zeal and friendship for Pero Naggian and Tabir Effendi, have led him to identify himself unknowingly with the estensible views of a secret society, the importance of which is extremely doubtful, but which seems to be governed more by hopes of temporal than spiritual benefits.

With regard to the impediments to the buildings of the Protestant schools at Nasheya, I have to state that none exist. The circumstances alluded to by Mr. Drake are as follows: the Roy. Mr. Wright applied to me for an order to the Kaimakam of Nasheya, to withdraw his opposition to the erection of certain small buildings. As such opposition was at direct variance with my experience of the action of Turkish officials in Syria in matters appertaining to British schools, I requested Mr. Wright to tell me plainly what it arose from; he replied that he believed it proceeded from a pique resulting from an idea that he was in some way connected with certain letters which had appeared in the Levant Hembl, reflecting upon local functionaries in reference to the Nasheya schools and other matters. I applied to the authorities in Damascus for an order, which however the Kaonakam evaded; a second having had no better result, I called upon the Matassarif, who expressed his regret, and at once disputched a mesonger to Nasheya, and removed the obstruction. The English missionaries have thought proper to express to me their indignation at the publication in the public press of this matter, and their intention of writing a letter to remove the impression sought to be conveyed. I begged them, however, not to do so. I may add-perimps needlesslythat neither they nor myself apprehended difficulty in obtaining from the authorities the same faculties and support for the Damuseus. Mission as are conceded to other British Missions in Syria.

Consul-General Eldridge to Earl Granville .- (Received November 21).

No. 44.)

My Lord, Beyrout, November 4, 1871 I HAVE had the honour to receive Mr. Hammond's despatch of the 14th ultima, transmitting to me an extract from the "Globe," and instructing me to report what foundation there is for the statement that Mr. Jago has left Danuscus, and if it is true, the reasons for his linving done so.

In reply I have the honour to report, that the statement of Mr. Jago having left Damaseus for a few days in the early part of September is perfectly true, but that the remons given for his having done so are entirely devoid of foundation.

The facts are as follows:---

During the summer and autumn of the present year the fevers that prevail in Damaseus at that season were annimally severe and dangerous.

Mr. Jago was obliged to live at the only hotel, which is althated in a most unhealthy part of the town, and shortly after his arrival both he and his servant were taken ill. As I knew that these fevers frequently end fatally, especially with new comers, who are not acclimatized, and that the only remedy is change of air, I urged Mr. Jago, if he faul no pressing business, to leave Damascus for a few days, offering him hospitality; be accepted my invitation, and the day following his arrival at Aleih he had a severe attack of fever, accompanied by delirium, which necessitated my sending some distance for a medical mon.

After remaining eight or ten days, Mr. Jago's health having improved, he returned Neither during his stay with me, nor in his correspondence, has Mr. Jago mentioned that he felt "nlarmed at certain demonstrations of dissatisfaction on the part of the parties," nor even that any such demonstrations were made, therefore I can only qualify that statement as entirely unfounded, so well as most of the others in Mr. Palmer'a letter.

From my knowledge of Mr. Jago I have so hesitation in saying that he would be the last man to take "advantage of an opportune fever" to desert his post in a moment of danger, or at a time when the public service might suffer by his temporary absence. He was incopacitated by serious illness from efficiently performing his duty, and he availed himself of the only remedy, change of air.

I trust the above explanation will prove satisfactory, and that Mr. Jago's and my conduct will meet with your Lordship's approval.

Sublime Porte, November 26, 1871.

L'AMBASSADE de Sa Majesté Britannique connaît l'incident surveux, il y a quelque temps, entre les gens du Consulat-Général d'Angleterre à Dames et quelques habitants de Nasareth.

La Sublimo Porte s'était empressée d'enjoindre aux autorités Impériales du Vilavet de Syrie de procéder à une caquête afin de décourrir et de punir les coupables. Il résulte d'un récent Rapport de ces autorités que le Tribunal Correctionnel de Sainte Jean d'Are, appelé à juger l'incident dont il s'agit, a condammé les nommés Gorgi Sulcyman, Halil Youssouf, Geegis, habitants de Nazareth, sinsi que Habib, domestique du Consulat, conformément à l'Article 179 du Code Pénal, à deux mois d'emprisonnement, et à un mois de détention les nommés Elias et Georgies Verver, également habitants de Nazareth; ainsi que les employés du Consulat, nommes Sayaraled, Antoun et le cavas Mehmed.

Ce jugement a été déjà dûment communiqué au Consulat d'Angleterre à Damas, et le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères s'empresse d'en porter le contenu à la connaissance de l'Ambassadeur de Sa Majesté Britannique.

Therapia, November 28, 1871.

HER Majesty's Embassy has had the honour to receive the Memorandum of the Sublime Porte, communicating the sentence passed by the Correctional Tribunal of St. Jean d'Acre upon various persons concerned in the affray at Nazareth.

The whole of the circumstances relating to that affair being about to be investigated by the Commission nominated for that purpose, it is not at present necessary for Her Majesty's Embassy to do more than state that the accounts which have been received do not tend to show that the inquiry at St. Jean d'Acre was of a nature calculated to meet the requirements of the case.
